“The presidency had made every man who occupied it, no matter how small, bigger than he was; and no matter how big, not big enough for its demands.”
- Lyndon B. Johnson

“The greatest leader is not necessarily the one who does the greatest things. He is the one that gets the people to do the greatest things.”
- Ronald Reagan

Course Description:

Leadership and the American Presidency will help students advance their own leadership development by examining the leadership journeys of the individuals who have held the office of the President. While there is no single course that can create a leader, this course through experiential learning, lectures, readings, guest speakers and real world application will help develop the knowledge, skills, and attitudes of a responsible citizen leader. This course examines selected theories and research on presidential leadership.

Course Objectives and Learning Outcomes:

The ultimate purpose of this course is to help students advance in their personal leadership journey through studying real history, real leaders and real world examples. Students will embark on a Presidential Leadership Journey, paralleling the experiences and challenges of the men who held the executive office with their own development. This hands on and interactive course will introduce the building blocks of successful leadership through presidential case studies, interaction and access to prominent leaders and a variety of leadership challenges and scenarios.
Using Washington, DC as their classroom, students will cultivate themselves as leaders through study, reflection and action.

By the end of this course, students will have an understanding of the different models and styles of leadership that have been effectively implemented in the oval office. Students will be able to cite relevant case studies, primary sources and examples from across the history of the American Presidency. Students will be able to assess their assets, deconstruct decision making, and implement a toolkit to meet challenges. Students will be able to compare and analyze different approaches to leadership grounded in history, theory and real life.

Assessment
Students will be expected to write reflections, speeches and proposals. Students grades will be based on participation and performance on assignments throughout the semester. Refer to appendices at end of syllabus for explanations and expectations of each assignment.

1 Participation will include class attendance, constructive discussion and commentary during class, completion of feedback forms as directed by RRPFI, and additional “mini-assignments” as outlined in the syllabus and/or detailed in class. All participation requirements outside of attendance and discussion during class will be introduced in class and via email and are expected to be complete by class time the following week.
Late assignments will be penalized one-third of the grade per day (from A to A-, from A- to B+, etc.) Incompletes will not be allowed. Problems with technology are not an acceptable reason for late work (backup your work!)

Policies
All assigned readings are to be completed before class to participate in discussions and activities.

Course Expectations and Requirements
All students are expected to attend class and to come fully prepared to participate having read all required readings as outlined. Absences will negatively affect your participation grade.

1. Expect Respect. Agree to Disagree - A student’s personal leadership journey always is accompanied by support and discourse. While we encourage students to challenge each other on substance we expect the highest degree of respect for each other and for people’s opinions.

2. Be a Presence - Attending class must be a priority for you and if it is not, this is the wrong course for you. We all encounter situations where events overtake us. If you will not make it to class please let us know ahead of time – not after the fact. In this age of mobile phones, email, Facebook and Twitter, there are rarely excuses for not informing us ahead of time. If you miss a class we may ask you to prepare an 800 word overview of the readings to be submitted before the start of the next class. This is not punitive. This is so that we can evaluate whether you have understood the readings for that week’s class.

3. Anticipate Need - Do not come to class unprepared. We expect that you will complete the assigned reading and that you will be able to summarize them and address specific issues raised in those readings when called upon in class. We expect you to have an understanding of the current leadership challenges faced by policymakers and legislators here in Washington DC. If you need recommendations for further reading beyond what is assigned or recommended, please feel free ask.

4. Contribute - Class participation is about what and how you contribute, not just your attendance. We expect you to read with a critical eye and consider the arguments the authors are making in their pieces. Participation is also more than asking the occasional question and thus you will be evaluated on the quality of your contribution and how it furthers the discussion. We also hope that you will share your own assessments, experiences and analysis of the issues we are discussing. In the end you will learn as much (if not more) from your peers and colleagues as from your professors.

5. Seek to Understand - Understanding is not about finding a good range of sources but about your analysis of those sources and the arguments you develop based on those sources. We are fair but tough graders and expect your work to be the product of significant effort. This means we expect thoroughly researched, thought-through and well-written pieces to include -- proper grammar, correct spelling, and correct citations. Last minute work rarely meets these standards, so please plan ahead.

Course Materials
Most readings will be available online through Blackboard, but it is recommended that you purchase the required readings below. Kindle versions are acceptable as well. Readings should be completed prior to the class under which they are listed.

Course Outline
This course is designed around the Presidential Leadership Journey that coincides with a student’s trajectory of learning and their own leadership potential. Recognizing that leadership is not linear, this course will integrate case studies, experiences and self reflection in order to develop a holistic leadership development experience.

The Presidential Leadership Journey
The Leadership Journey was developed as an opportunity to discover personal leadership through the lens of the American presidency and the exemplary men who have served in office. Themes are reflective of the Presidential leadership journeys, but also representative of the leadership journeys that we all embark upon throughout life. Washington, DC will serve as an experiential classroom as we engage in off site, hands-on learning opportunities aligning with Leadership Journey themes.

1) The Origins – The Foundations of a Leader
Students will examine the origins of our nation’s leaders and the lessons learned in their formative years including inspiration for character, values, and the other building blocks of leadership. They will analyze which elements of their story most shaped their experiences in the White House. Students will then identify personal values and defining moments as well as issues and causes that they find important and compelling.

2) The Team – From Kitchen Cabinet to Team of Rivals
This theme explores the critical process by which leaders find, select, develop and maintain the relationships that help or hinder their ability to lead. Students will examine their personal team and how this contributes to their overall effectiveness as a leader.

3) The First 100 Days – Crafting, Sharing and Launching the Vision
This theme considers the crucial importance of first impressions and the start of any leadership position in establishing the tone of an administration and laying the foundation on which an organization will be built. Developing a strategic plan will be a focus of The First 100 Days.

4) The State of the Union – Communicating, Agenda Setting and Messaging
The State of the Union is the culmination of an administration’s efforts to develop systems, prioritize goals, set an agenda, and then communicate those to the American people. Students will examine presidential strategy and communication and how it can launch or cripple an administration’s agenda. They will communicate their own plans, and inspire others to action.

5) The Challenges – The Opposition, Press and Pressure
No matter how effective or popular a leader may be, challenges will arise that will hinder their vision. Students will explore how leaders have navigated challenges throughout their tenures and what success or failure in the face of adversity may look like.

6) The Inevitable Crisis – From Controversy to Tragedy
This theme examines challenges to leadership that occur with very little lead time (if any) and require immediate action. Building emotional intelligence can help leaders to respond in times of crisis. As students have built a “tool kit” they will be prepared to tackle ambiguous and challenging crises.

7) The Renewal – Adapting, Reflecting and Reprioritizing
This theme acknowledges that despite best efforts, plans may go awry. Resilience will be examined as students understand the importance of adapting and emerging from challenges or a crisis.

8) The Legacy – The Farewell Address
The lesson for students in this theme is not to work to create a legacy, but to do those things that will carry on beyond their time as leaders and leave their organization or country in a better place. In a forward-thinking way, students will thoughtfully reflect on the skills they have built and the growth they’ve experienced throughout their journey.
Prologue: Legacy - The Farewell Address

How do I want to be remembered?

Beginning with the end in mind, the course will look at the legacy of a President and contemplate their own desired impression or mark they want to leave on the world.

Week 1: Introductory Class

Tuesday, June 5: 4:30pm-7:00pm

Class Location: TBD

Introductions by staff, professors and students. Review of expectations and experiences for the course.

Class Location:

b. Article II, U.S. Constitution
The Origins – The Foundations of a Leader

What in my life has shaped me?

Students will examine the origins of our nation’s leaders and the lessons that they learned during their formative years that shaped their experiences in the White House. They will then identify personal values and strengths as well as issues and causes that they find important and compelling.

Week 2:

Tuesday, June 12: 4:30pm-7:00pm

Class Location:

DUE:

1. Participation:
   a. Complete feedback form #1 (google form) as directed in weekly email

Week 2: Core Values

Friday, June 15 - 9:00am-12:30pm

Class Location: Mount Vernon

*depart from GW at 8:45am - details to follow

Please wear LTAP tshirts

DUE:
The Team – The Company You Keep

With whom do I surround myself?

All Presidents model the critical process by which leaders find, select, develop and maintain the relationships that help or hinder their ability to lead. Students will identify and analyze their own support network or “Kitchen Cabinet” and also begin to build coalitions based on common interests or varied strengths, and collaborate with individuals who may offer new perspectives or expertise.

Week 3: The Team

Tuesday, June 19: 4:30pm-7:00pm

Class Location:

- Optional: Nannerl O. Keohane, "Collaboration and Leadership: Are They in Conflict?", College Board Review.

1. Op-ed Assignment due by midnight

Week 3: The Team

Friday, June 22 - 9:00am-12:00pm

Class Location: President Lincoln’s Cottage

140 Rock Creek Church Rd NW, Washington, DC 20011
The First One Hundred Days - Crafting, Sharing and Launching a Vision

What is my vision for a better world?

This theme will look at the importance of the student of any leadership position in establishing the tone of an administration and laying the foundation on which the organization will be build. This beginning has everything to do with crafting a vision, communicating it, and launching that vision in the best way possible. As agents of change, good leaders will set lofty goals and then empower others to help carry out that vision. The importance of a strong (though not necessarily flashy) start for any leader can not be overstated.

Week 4: Vision Plans

Tuesday, June 26 - 4:30pm-7:00pm

Class Location:

DUE:

Participation:
a. Complete feedback form #2 (google form) as directed in weekly email

The State of the Union – Communicating, Agenda Setting and Messaging

How do I call others to action?

The State of the Union examines the crafting of a vision and the means of communicating the goals and ideals of a presidential administration. Students will examine presidential communication and how it can launch or cripple an administration’s agenda. Forged upon their understanding of their personal strengths and values, students will then craft a larger vision and mission, communicate their plan, and inspire others to action.

Week 4: Oratory Workshop

Friday, June 29 - 9:00am-11:30am

Class Location: Ford’s Theatre
511 10th St. NW

c. President Reagan’s Westminster Speech

Due:

2. Policy Memo Assignment due by midnight
Week 5: Great Communication

Friday, July 6 - 9:00am-11:30am

Class Location: 1495 F St NW
Pepco Conference Room & FDR + MLK Memorials

Due:

3. Participation:

The Challenges – The Opposition, Press and Pressure

How do I handle adversity?

No matter how effective or popular a leader may be, challenges will arise that will hinder their vision. Students will explore how Presidents have navigated challenges throughout their tenures and what success or failure in the face of adversity may look like.

Week 6: Challenges

Tuesday, July 10 - 4:30pm-7:00pm

Class Location: Holocaust Memorial Museum
100 Raoul Wallenberg Pl SW

c. American Immigration Law reading (in blackboard)

The Inevitable Crisis – From Controversy to Tragedy

What tools and assets do I have to emerge from the toughest of times?

This theme examines challenges to leadership that occur with very little lead time (if any) and require immediate action with little time to evaluate options. Building emotional intelligence can help leaders to respond in times of crisis. As students have built a “tool kit” they will be prepared to tackle ambiguous and challenging crises with perhaps multiple actions, solutions and outcomes available.

Week 6: Crisis Simulation

Friday, July 13 - 9:00am-11:30am

Class Location TBD

Due:

4. Participation: Complete feedback form #6 (google form) as directed in weekly email

5. Great Communicator Speech assignment due by midnight

The Renewal – Adapting, Reflecting, and Reprioritizing

How do I maintain focus through the duration of my journey?

This theme acknowledges that despite best efforts, plans may go awry and administrations will need to reset their priorities. Teams will be challenged to move forward or adjust course with their vision and final deliverable. They will ultimately present their final efforts to experts and leaders in their fields or disciplines.

Week 7: Building Resilience
Tuesday, July 17 - 4:30pm-7:00pm

Class Location:

a. Bill George, True North, Chapter 8, “Staying Grounded: Integrating Your Life”.

c. Leader Biography: Jean Case

2. Participation: Complete feedback form #7 (google form) as directed in weekly email

Back to the Legacy – The Farewell Address

How do I want to be remembered?

Legacy is an inevitable albeit most times unplanned aspect of a President’s lasting impression on the world. The lesson for students in this theme is not to work to create a legacy, but to do those things that will carry on beyond their time as leaders and leave their organization and the country in a better place. In a forward-thinking way, students will thoughtfully reflect on the skills they have built and the growth they’ve experienced throughout their journey.

Integrity and Code of Conduct

The integrity of the University community is affected by the individual choices made by each of us. GMU has an Honor Code with clear guidelines regarding academic integrity. Three fundamental and rather simple principles to follow at all times are that: (1) all work submitted be your own; (2) when using the work or ideas of others, including fellow students, give full credit through accurate citations; and (3) if you are uncertain about the ground rules on a particular assignment, ask for clarification. No grade is important enough to justify academic misconduct. Plagiarism means using the exact words, opinions, or factual information from another person without giving the person credit. Writers give credit through accepted documentation styles, such as parenthetical citation, footnotes, or endnotes. Paraphrased material must also be cited, using MLA or APA format. A simple listing of books or articles is not sufficient. Plagiarism is the equivalent of intellectual robbery and cannot be tolerated in the academic setting. If you have any doubts about what constitutes plagiarism, please see me.

A full text of the Honor Code is available at:
http://mason.gmu.edu/~montecin/plagiarism.htm

A good guide to the problem of plagiarism and how to avoid it is available at:
http://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/589/01/. You will even find a useful plagiarism exercise.

Plagiarism Statement: Plagiarism means using the exact words, opinions, or factual information from another person without giving that person credit. Writers give credit through accepted documentation styles, such as parenthetical citation, footnotes, or endnotes; a simple listing of books and articles is not sufficient. Plagiarism is the equivalent of intellectual robbery and cannot be tolerated in an academic setting. Student writers are often confused as to what should be cited. Some think that only direct quotations need to be credited. While direct quotations do need citations, so do paraphrases and summaries of opinions or factual information formerly unknown to the writers or which the writers did not discover themselves. Exceptions for this include factual information which can be obtained from a variety of sources, the writers' own insights or findings from their own field research, and what has been termed common knowledge. What constitutes common knowledge can sometimes be precarious; what is common knowledge for one audience may not be so for another. In such situations, it is helpful, to keep the reader in mind and to think of citations as being "reader friendly." In other words, writers provide a citation for any piece of information that they think their readers might want to investigate further. Not only is this attitude considerate of readers, it will almost certainly ensure that writers will never be guilty of plagiarism.

(statement of English Department at George Mason University) Plagiarism and the Internet: Copyright rules also apply to users of the Internet who cite from Internet sources. Information and graphics accessed electronically must also be cited, giving credit to the sources. This material includes but is not limited to e-mail (don't cite or forward someone else's email without permission), newsgroup material, information from Web sites, including graphics. Even if you give credit, you must get permission from the original source to put any graphic that you did not create on your web page. Shareware graphics are not free. Freeware clipart is available for you to freely use. If the material does not say "free," assume it is not. Putting someone else's Internet material on your web page is stealing intellectual property. Making links to a site is, at this time, okay, but getting permission is strongly advised, since many Websites have their own requirements for linking to their material. (Virginia Montecino)

Note: Student Accommodation / Disability

If you are a student with a disability and you need academic accommodations, please see me and contact the Office of Disability Services (ODS) at 703 993 2474, http://ods.gmu.edu. All academic accommodations must be arranged through the ODS.
APPENDIX 1: Op-Ed Piece

DUE: June 20

This assignment is a chance for you to put together one of the primary documents by which national security issues are debated in the public arena – the Opinion Editorial, or “OpEd.” Most Op-Eds relate to current news events, but they may also provide a creative approach to an old problem. An OpEd is distinct from an “editorial” which is put together by an editorial board and printed as the collective view of a newspaper. An OpEd, on the other hand, is from an outside contributor. While based on your views, they should be balanced with objective factual information. While most Op-Ed’s are 500-800 words in length, for purposes of our assignment, you will write an 800 word piece, the length of a longer Op-Ed. A few more details:

1. Please submit your paper in 12pt Times New Roman font with single spacing.
2. Make sure your name is on the paper as well as the date.
3. You will need to craft a short “byline” as well. See attached for an example.

Oh, and one more thing – OpEds benefit from catchy titles.

As this is a course assignment we will have to make some modifications. Most OpEd writers have a decent command of their topics so their ideas are often original commentary and citations are not an issue. I suspect you all will have original ideas as well. There is no shame in the policy arena for adapting what others have done to turn ideas into action – but you must acknowledge that in your work. If you take an idea from someone else, give them credit. What I will ask for is a page following your op-ed that includes a bibliography of sources consulted. You should list the Sources Consulted using bibliographic formats found in a recognized style guide such as the Chicago Manual of Style. Citation guides may be found at: http://libguides.gwu.edu/content.php?pid=8881

In terms of topics, you can write on any relevant policy topic of your choosing but you must be able to argue a particular position or address a specific issue that rises to a level where senior policymakers might need to address it. This does not have to be on an inherently political issue.

If you have any questions about your topic – just ask.
APPENDIX 2: Great Communicator Speech

DUE: July 14

Background: Great presidential speeches inspire the American people, challenge us to embrace new ideas, comfort us in times of darkness, and lift us to heights we never dreamt possible. While presidential speeches certainly articulate policy, they also strongly convey values. Presidential speeches, previously delivered to elite audiences have now become a chief vehicle to connect with everyday Americans. Every line is painstakingly drafted, critiqued, edited, and often even tested. Advocacy and lobbying groups consider it a major victory to get a single word mentioned in a presidential speech. While modern Presidents certainly have a hand in crafting their hallmark speeches, they need speechwriters to ensure that they communicate their ideas in the most clear and powerful fashion. After all, speeches are a large part of a President’s legacy.

Your Assignment: In this assignment, you are a speechwriter for the President, who after some time is finally addressing an issue that is your life’s passion. You need to wordsmith a presidential speech for the ages. The President has agreed to give you 3 --5 minutes to communicate to the American people and persuade them to support your issue and perhaps even be called to action. Consider what your audience (everyday Americans) may already know about the issue, what opinions they may already have, and address potential misconceptions. Be clear about the call to action.

Remember, you’re writing for the general American audience, that reads at roughly a seventh-grade level. This doesn’t mean writing simplistically, but instead communicating clearly.

- Choose an issue that moves you and that you’re truly committed to working on
- 3--5 minute speech (Be sure to read this aloud at a presidential pace)
- Reference a favorite presidential speech from the past
- Effectively utilize the rhetorical triangle
- Share a story or anecdote that helps

Before you start writing, be sure to channel inspiration and energy from great presidential speeches of the past. Why is President Washington’s Farewell Address always invoked? Why can we all recite the first lines of the Gettysburg Address? What was so powerful about President Kennedy’s challenge to the American people in his Inaugural Address? What was so significant about President Reagan’s call to the General Secretary in the Address at the Brandenburg Gate? What made them so memorable? Powerful? Historical? If you can answer these questions, you may yet get your membership in the Judson Welliver Society

APPENDIX 3: Policy Memo

DUE: June 30

Background: The “policy memorandum” is the principal vehicle by which issues are teed up to senior leadership and interagency working groups. Some memoranda are designed to tee up a decision or recommend a course of action and others are designed quite simply to inform. As such, an information memorandum must be exceedingly clear and succinct as senior policy makers may see several memos a day. An information memo can be any length but they tend to be one to two pages long. They tend to be part of a “read ahead” package that will include supporting material such as biographies, maps, or even more detailed analysis. There is a real art to the one or two page memo and if you can master that art this will improve your ability to make things happen in a bureaucracy.

Your Assignment: In this assignment you will use a policy memorandum to prepare your boss for an important meeting. Depending on the issue and scenario you choose, your boss may need to convince another senior official, a Member of Congress, a foreign Minister or Head of State to take a particular position or make a particular decision on an issue of your choice. Your “read ahead” package needs to prepare your boss to make a compelling argument during this meeting and should include the following:

- 1-2 page policy memo
- One page of talking points
- Tabs with supporting material (as appropriate)

This is not a “long” writing assignment but you will spend significant time because writing clearly and concisely will take time and there is less room for error. An information memo will prioritize the presentation of facts and help your boss get up to speed on the issue. It should also help your boss understand who agrees and disagrees with the proposed position and what the competing argument are. The “talking points” should be written in a fairly scripted way so that your boss can actually use them in a meeting.
We would prefer that you pick a current topic / issue rather than a historical one – but will consider exceptions if there is a case to be made. More guidance will be provided early on in the course.
